

Fridays and Weekends are kind of not a thing for me at the moment—the days week kind of all just blur together. This past “Monday to Friday,” week, however, turned out to be distinctive in that it was particularly difficult for me on a pretty personal level. When this daily devotional dropped into my email, it was very timely for me, so I wanted to share it.

You can subscribe to it at www.crosswalk.com/devotionals/bible-study-minute/. The link for this specific devotional can be found at the end of today’s reflection. This devotional series is also available as a nice little podcast called “Your Daily Bible Verse” that can be found on Lifeaudio.com, Spotify, Apple Podcasts, and other podcasting Apps. Pastor Mark

The Power of Yet
By Brent Rinehart

Have you experienced times in your life where you can’t feel God’s presence? When the worst happens in our lives, while we do our best to cling to our faith, it’s easy to question God. Where is He when a loved one dies far too young? Where is God in divorce, disease and death? Where is He when war rages? These are age-old questions humans have struggled with for centuries, and questions we can easily ask today.

It seems as if the world is on the brink of disaster, so we are left searching for God through all of it.

Habakkuk wrote his prophecy at time when he and God’s people were asking the same questions. The Babylonians were preparing to invade Judah where the remnant of God’s people remained. This was a direct judgment from the Lord, for they had experienced rapid moral and spiritually decline. Habakkuk complains against God, not understanding how he could use a downright wicked nation in Babylon to judge a less wicked one in Judah. But, we know that God’s ways are not our ways (Isaiah 55:8-9).

I can’t read this passage and not think about the classic hymn “It is Well With My Soul.” Many people know the dramatic story behind it. Horatio Spafford

Habakkuk 3:17-19b

“Though the fig tree should not blossom, nor fruit be on the vines, the produce of the olive fail and the fields yield no food, the flock be cut off from the fold and there be no herd in the stalls, yet I will rejoice in the Lord; I will take joy in the God of my salvation. God, the Lord, is my strength”

Fridays and Weekends are kind of not a thing for me at the moment—the days week kind of all just blur together. This past “Monday to Friday,” week, however, turned out to be distinctive in that it was particularly difficult for me on a pretty personal level. When this daily devotional dropped into my email, it was very timely for me, so I wanted to share it.

You can subscribe to it at www.crosswalk.com/devotionals/bible-study-minute/. The link for this specific devotional can be found at the end of today’s reflection. This devotional series is also available as a nice little podcast called “Your Daily Bible Verse” that can be found on Lifeaudio.com, Spotify, Apple Podcasts, and other podcasting Apps. Pastor Mark

The Power of Yet
By Brent Rinehart

Have you experienced times in your life where you can’t feel God’s presence? When the worst happens in our lives, while we do our best to cling to our faith, it’s easy to question God. Where is He when a loved one dies far too young? Where is God in divorce, disease and death? Where is He when war rages? These are age-old questions humans have struggled with for centuries, and questions we can easily ask today.

It seems as if the world is on the brink of disaster, so we are left searching for God through all of it.

Habakkuk wrote his prophecy at time when he and God’s people were asking the same questions. The Babylonians were preparing to invade Judah where the remnant of God’s people remained. This was a direct judgment from the Lord, for they had experienced rapid moral and spiritually decline. Habakkuk complains against God, not understanding how he could use a downright wicked nation in Babylon to judge a less wicked one in Judah. But, we know that God’s ways are not our ways (Isaiah 55:8-9).

I can’t read this passage and not think about the classic hymn “It is Well With My Soul.” Many people know the dramatic story behind it. Horatio Spafford

Habakkuk 3:17-19b

“Though the fig tree should not blossom, nor fruit be on the vines, the produce of the olive fail and the fields yield no food, the flock be cut off from the fold and there be no herd in the stalls, yet I will rejoice in the Lord; I will take joy in the God of my salvation. God, the Lord, is my strength”

wrote the lyrics after a series of traumatic events: his two sons died in the Chicago fire of 1871 and the rest of his family perished two years later when their ship crossing the Atlantic sank. YET, even after all of those things, he was able to write:

“When peace like a river, attendeth my way, When sorrows like sea billows roll; Whatever my lot, Thou hast taught me to say, It is well, it is well, with my soul.”

What are you going through today? Does it seem like your world is falling apart? Know this: you don't choose what you go through, but you can choose how you go through it. Choose joy, and know that God is good, just and merciful. No matter what you face, you can choose to say, “YET, I will rejoice in the Lord...the God of my salvation.”

Source: <https://www.crosswalk.com/devotionals/bible-study-minute/your-daily-bible-verse-may-29.html>, Date viewed (May 29, 2020)

Brent Rinehart is a public relations practitioner and freelance writer. He blogs about the amazing things parenting teaches us about life, work, faith and more at www.apparentstuff.com. You can also follow him on Twitter at @brentrinehart.

wrote the lyrics after a series of traumatic events: his two sons died in the Chicago fire of 1871 and the rest of his family perished two years later when their ship crossing the Atlantic sank. YET, even after all of those things, he was able to write:

“When peace like a river, attendeth my way, When sorrows like sea billows roll; Whatever my lot, Thou hast taught me to say, It is well, it is well, with my soul.”

What are you going through today? Does it seem like your world is falling apart? Know this: you don't choose what you go through, but you can choose how you go through it. Choose joy, and know that God is good, just and merciful. No matter what you face, you can choose to say, “YET, I will rejoice in the Lord...the God of my salvation.”

Source: <https://www.crosswalk.com/devotionals/bible-study-minute/your-daily-bible-verse-may-29.html>, Date viewed (May 29, 2020)

Brent Rinehart is a public relations practitioner and freelance writer. He blogs about the amazing things parenting teaches us about life, work, faith and more at www.apparentstuff.com. You can also follow him on Twitter at @brentrinehart.